DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 1, 3, 4, 6-9, 12, 14-16, 18, 20-22 and 26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Rinner et al. (U.S. Patent No. 6,551,316).

Rinner et al. discloses a receiving component (68) having a longitudinal axis and defining a cavity (69), a modular tip including a mating component (71), a spring (77), a locking mechanism (76 and 77) at the receiving component (located at the end of a handle (11) that extends through the cavity that is slideably moveable to and from a locked position while the locking mechanism engages at least two outer surfaces (opposite sides of the locking mechanism provides two surfaces) of the mating component, and the mating component is coupled to the receiving component to form a coupling such that the coupling without the engagement of the locking mechanism to the mating component can prevent relative movement between the mating component and the receiving component when a force is applied to the coupling in a direction substantially parallel to the longitudinal axis. The mating component has at least three planar surfaces configured to engage at least three planar surfaces of the receiving component because the cavity and mating component have a rectangular shape. The geometry of the mating component as well as the cavity will prevent movement in a parallel direction when a force is applied in that same direction caused by friction. Even though movement is not restricted, friction resists the component in the opposite direction to prevent this movement. Also, the receiving component includes a recess and an opening that form a connecting member in the receiving component, where the connecting member is configured to cooperatively engage a recess in the mating component (see Figure 1 below).

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 2 and 17 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Response to Arguments

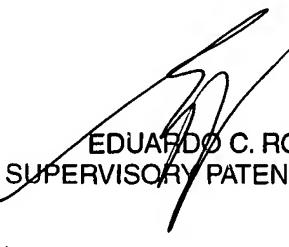

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-7, 12 and 14-22 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
